Audition for the Sedos production of David Harrower's
adaptation of Gogol's

~ Government Inspector ~

"Don't blame the mirror if your face is lopsided."

This satire is a seedy, sexy, ridiculous farce. We want to create a crazy, hectic and amazing show for audiences in London and Edinburgh. We are looking for actors and actresses who enjoy being part of a company, working hard on verbal and physical comedy and having a giggle on and off stage.

This video of our journey in 2012 is the best way to describe what we want to create (http://m.youtube.com/watch?v=8_WGARyqRsY). So if you liked the look of that, come along to our workshop on Thursday, 8 May. Better yet, book an audition slot for 13 or 15 May.

Edinburgh Performances

Performing at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival is more than a show week—it's also a fantastic holiday, a whirlwind of theatrical spectacle, and the chance to test your performance mettle in renowned venue. It's a great location, right next to the Pleasance, a leading comedy/theatre venue. The Monkey House is a 90-seater thrust stage, and ZOO Venues are a friendly and helpful company who really get on board with every show they produce. We have previously worked with them during As You Like It and we are very excited to be returning.

As we realize most of our cast will have to take time from work to participate, we will obviously ensure you have plenty of free time to see shows, explore the city and soak up the vibe.

That said, joining the Government Inspector cast will require commitment. In addition to performances, you will have allotted flyering time and marketing participation.

London Performances

In addition to our exciting run at ZOO, Government Inspector will give four preview performances, as part of the Sedos Summer Festival at the Bridewell Theatre - perfect for inviting your local friends and family.

Our vision

Russia, 1970. Sex crazed, greedy and idiotic, the local government rules over a bleak isolated town with an iron fist. When they receive warning that an incognito government inspector is en route to investigate, panic duly ensues. This dandified stranger demands bribes, flirts with the mayor's wife and seduces his daughter. Everyone is riled up but relieved when he finally leaves. But then comes a dismaying letter...

Gogol's biting satire was first published in 1836 but still holds a very tarnished mirror up to our own "greed is good" culture. He presents a world where there is little justice or hope for the underdog. It is perhaps surprising then, that Government Inspector is one of finest comic plays of the 19th century. Gogol believed that his play should educate and entertain simultaneously and the best way to get a message across was through laughter. It is this ethos that we wish to carry out with our production.

We are working with a wonderfully dark and hilarious adaptation by David Harrower and it is his text that has inspired us to set our production in the 1970s, when the fashion and attitude reflect the absurdly normal bureaucracy of the piece. Inspiration comes from politicians of the era whose sweaty ambition embodies the creepy, pathetic civil servants of Gogol's work.

Whilst thinking about production design, we were reminded that the Fawlty Towers episode from 1975 titled "The Hotel Inspector" is based on Gogol's play. We loved that the look of the show remained quite realistic with hints of the ridiculous. We are very lucky that we have costume designer Edith Webb on our production team again and her work really cements our production in the environment of the time. Many productions feel compelled to present the play as a broad farce or as an exploration of the darker side of humanity. We are merging the two presentations to create a work we believe will resonate with Fringe audiences.

During our experience with As You Like It at Edinburgh Fringe, we learned that the attendees want to see well-known, fun and easy-going shows. However, no-one wants to compromise quality or Gogol's incredible writing. Rarely can one find a truly funny show that is also a scathing and accurate piece of satire. So in our production, the characterizations will stay grounded to the text to create an innovative, character-driven work.

Character Breakdown

The Mayor, male, 30s-50s: A paranoid dictator. So eager to climb the ranks of petty bureaucracy he has no qualms with who he destroys on the way. He has no desire to make his town better or life for his constituency any easier, all he wants is power and money. He is nasty but nervous of stepping too far out of line. A coward.

Khlestakov, male, 20s: A frivolous imposter. The supposed Government Inspector is a complete fraud and relishes in his deception of the country town. He has a voracious appetite for good clothes, women and most of all money. A liar.

Osip, male, any age: Khlestakov's put upon servant. Osip is a Khlestakov in the making, he has no scruples, however unlike his feckless boss he has the street smarts to know when it's time to call it quits and move onto the next scam. A Russian Del-Boy.

Lyapkin-Tyapkin, male, any age: A corrupt swindler. The local judge has no interest in justice and would rather spend his time hunting game and breeding borzoi puppies. He believes bribery and lying are the only way of getting on in life. A layabout.

Zemlyanika, male, any age: A eager to please civil servant. The trustee of charitable institutions is perhaps a little too eager, one might say a slimy creep. Sees something of himself in the young "Inspector" and acts as an equal causing some embarrassment to the others. A lick arse.

Dobchinsky, male or female, any age: A bumbling idiot. This landowner is desperate to be considered an important member of the local government, unfortunately s/he is a buffoon. Never seen without partner in crime, Bobchinsky. A fool.

Bobchinsky, male or female, any age: A bumbling idiot. This landowner is also desperate to be considered an important member of the local government, unfortunately s/he is even more of a buffoon, than Dobchinsky. The two are always in competition to be more helpful than the other, however they only succeed in outdoing each other in idiotic antics. Another fool.

Anna, female, 30s/40s: A social climber. The Mayor's glamorous but crass wife is determined that she deserves more. A better looking husband, a bigger house, a more beautiful wardrobe. When the "Inspector" arrives she believes all her prayers have been answered. A snob.

Maria, female, 20s: A vain air-head. The Mayor's daughter is desperate for a husband but she has no interest in falling in love, she wants a handsome face and a hefty wallet. So it becomes awkward when her main rival for the attention of the "Inspector" is her own mother. A flirt.

Khlopov, female, any age: A timid teacher's pet. The school's superintendent is scared witless of the Mayor, the "Inspector", the school, the teachers, the pupils, pretty much everything she comes across. Desperate not to be involved with the inspection she becomes the perfect scapegoat for the others. A nervous ninny.

Postmistress, female, any age: A nosey parker. The gossip of the group, she has no scruples with going through people's post in order to be the most up-to-date. She is eager to prove how integral she is to the running of the town and will take praise for actions that aren't even hers, which inevitably lands her in hot water. (Actress will also play the Sergeant's Wife)

Avdotya, female, any age: A grumpy housekeeper. Avdotya has no interest in the "Inspector", she has even less interest in her master and mistress. She knows her place and refuses to strive above it. She will not be brought or flirted with, unless you want a smack around the chops. (Actress will also play the Locksmith's Wife & Waitress)
